are just born with naturally thin or distorted lips. And still, there are others who have been genetically graced with full lips and want them to be even fuller.

Plump, full, luscious lips are all the rage among the Gen Z set these days for several reasons. The first explanation behind the big lip sensation is that celebrities are increasingly opting for augmentation procedures and sharing their results on social media.

The second reason that dermal lip filler treatments are becoming increasingly part of the beauty mainstream is that they are more widely available, becoming almost as commonplace as mani-pedis.

Still another reason for the rise in popularity, derma lip filler injections are relatively painless, undetectable, and produce immediate, IG-worthy results, allowing patients to get back to their lives on the same day.

Dermal Fillers are made from an injectable gel made from hyaluronic acid, a naturally occurring substance produced by the body that attracts and binds water, helping the skin stay plump and hydrated.

When injected into the lips and the skin around them, dermal fillers add volume and symmetry, soften and fill lines, and create plump, luscious, fuller-looking lips by expanding the tissue beneath the area to produce a subtle, natural look that can last *6 to 18 months.
